"BUT WHAT IF THERE WERE HUNDREDS OF US?" She joined him, surveying the field. "I imagine us camped here like a rebel army. We would exchange secret skills and wild ideas, share resources, play forbidden games, fall in love, lay plans for the coming months."
"Like an anarchist conference, you mean?" * "—But without registration fees, or presenters at podiums, or things for sale. We would all be presenters and organizers, and everything would be free, including food and childcare. Not a conference so much as a festival, or a way station for escapees, or maybe a council of war."
